

Help Prevent Sexual Harassment in Agriculture

W BOTHELL

Join our advisory team today!

Do you work in agriculture as a farm worker or a farm supervisor? Are you interested in helping to create a healthy and safe work place, free of sexual harassment and sexual violence? If so, join our feedback advisory group!

Project Information

Faculty from the University of Washington have teamed up with PNASH, AJL Productions, farm workers and growers in Yakima and Wenatchee, WA Human Rights Commission, NW Justice Project, the WA Coalition to Prevent Sexual Harassment in Agriculture, and others, to create a work site training video and toolkit to help prevent and reduce sexual harassment in agriculture. The training materials are in English and in Spanish. We are seeking those with experience working in agriculture to review the training materials and to give feedback to our research and production team.

Feedback Activities

You will be asked to review and to provide written or oral feedback to our team on the video trailer, video script, and the facilitator's guide and related training activities. Your participation and your responses will be confidential. Feedback period is Jan. - March 2019.

Eligibility

To join this advisory group, you must:

- Work as a farm worker or as a farm supervisor in Washington or have expertise on the topic of sexual harassment in agriculture.
- Have at least two years experience working in agriculture.
- Be over 18 years old.
- Speak and read Spanish or English fluently.

How to Participate

Call our project coordinator, Elizabeth Torres, at (509) 853-9433 to sign up or email her at etorres@kdna.org. Si Habla español. Or you can contact Jody Early, principal investigator, at Jearly3@uw.edu.

For more details, visit our website at <http://deohs.washington.edu/pnash/sexual-harassment>

